STAR LIFECYCLE

A STEP-BY-STEP LOOK AT HOW PLANTS CREATE THEIR FOOD.

ABSORPTION OF LIGHT

Photosynthesis begins with the absorption of light by the green pigment on plants called chlorophyll. These pigments are attached to the proteins found in the thylakoids of chloroplasts. After the light energy is absorbed, it will then be utilized to remove electrons in common donors like water, thereby forming oxygen. Afterwards, the electrons will be moved to quinone (Q), a primary electron receptor similar to CoQ in the electron transfer chain.
